

Media

FIS Alpine World Ski Championships Saalbach 2025 - February 4 to 16, 2025

#welcometoskiverrückt (Englisch)

34 years after the legendary “Sun World Championships” in 1991, the FIS Alpine World Ski Championships will once again be held in Saalbach in February 2025. From 4 to 16 February 2025, Saalbach will once again be transformed into the center of international skiing. “The anticipation is huge - together we want to keep the enthusiasm for skiing in Austria high and at the same time set sustainable impulses for future generations as well as Saalbach and the Salzburg region,” says Florian Phleps, Project Manager of Saalbach 2025.

One mountain - all competitions

At the heart of the 2025 World Championships is the innovative “One mountain - all competitions” concept. All races will take place on the Zwölferkogel in Hinterglemm, which combines all World Championship slopes on one mountain and offers a central finish area for all disciplines. A total of 11 medal decisions will be held here and all the action will be concentrated in the center of Hinterglemm. Thanks to the short distances, all the important locations are within walking distance, which is particularly convenient for spectators and participants.

Public skiing remains possible without restrictions during the entire event. Fans from the Salzburg region and Tyrol have the opportunity to ski directly to the slopes. Thanks to the modern infrastructure of the Skicircus Saalbach Hinterglemm Leogang Fieberbrunn, guests can easily access the ski area and ski directly to the race on the Zwölferkogel without having to search for a parking space.

Media

Focus on sustainability

The FIS Alpine World Ski Championships 2025 set a clear signal for sustainability and aim to be a green benchmark for future sporting events.

Short distances, a modern mountain railroad and piste infrastructure as well as pedestrian accessibility to all event hotspots are key elements of the sustainability concept. In addition, special attention is paid to environmentally friendly travel options - whether by public transport or on skis. The principles of REDUCE, RE-USE and RECYCLE are consistently implemented in all structural measures.

An event of superlatives

The FIS Alpine World Ski Championships 2025 promise a unique spectacle for winter sports fans worldwide. Saalbach, which already shone as host in 1991, is now one of the leading ski resorts in Europe. The modern infrastructure, first-class slopes and the breathtaking mountain scenery of the Zwölferkogel provide the perfect stage for an event of this magnitude.

The FIS Alpine World Ski Championships 2025 in Saalbach represent a perfect blend of top sporting performance, incomparable natural scenery and a unique atmosphere. This event will undoubtedly be an unforgettable highlight in the international winter sports calendar.